Neuberger Berman Small Cap Intrinsic Value Portfolio

Private equity-style approach seeking to invest in financially strong, underperforming companies with potential catalysts for value creation

The NB Small Cap Intrinsic Value Portfolio seeks what the team believes are misunderstood and mispriced companies with complex corporate structures, cyclical businesses or growing franchises with temporarily interrupted growth. The team applies a private equity-style analysis to publicly traded companies to identify companies that are temporarily out of favor, trading at a meaningful discount to their estimate of intrinsic value.¹ A catalyst for change or other strategic events that will unlock value must also be present. The team is not an idle investor; it is willing to engage with companies' boards, wage proxy battles or inject capital to help unlock value and pursue better outcomes for shareholders.

Strategy Overview

The team seeks to exploit market opportunities across three types of companies and has a willingness to make investments in misunderstood, out-of-favor companies that in the team's view investors often mistakenly pass on.

¹ Intrinsic value reflects the group's analysis and estimates. There is no guarantee that any intrinsic values will be realized; security prices may decrease regardless of intrinsic values.

Smaller companies tend to be acquired more frequently than larger companies and for higher premiums

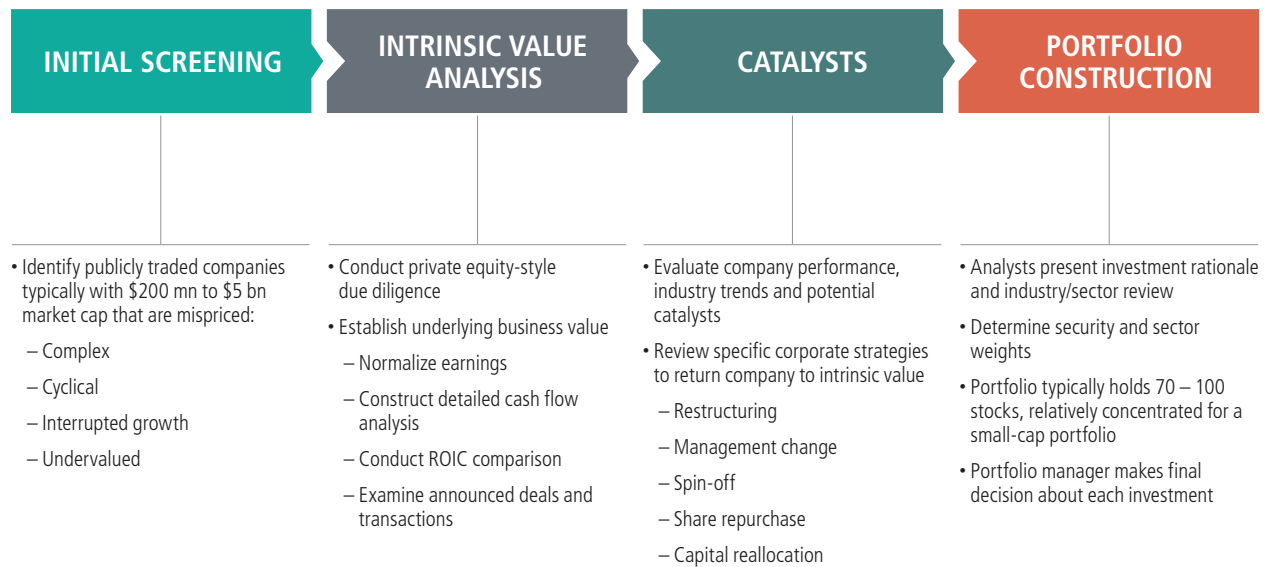

More acquisitions, higher premiums

Small capitalization stocks are typically more vulnerable to financial and market risks and uncertainties than large-capitalization stocks. They also trade less frequently and in lower volume than large-capitalized stocks, and thus may be more volatile and be less liquid. Consequently, investments in small-capitalization stocks may not be appropriate or suitable for all investors.
